By Claudia Dobson Largie

In her new book, Country Jumper: The Gabon Years, Claudia Dobson Largie recounts her incredible journey as a young diplomat's wife in Gabon. From dancing with pygmies to navigating political unrest, Largie paints a vivid and unforgettable portrait of a country on the cusp of change.

Largie's journey begins in the early 1960s, when she and her husband, a young Canadian diplomat, are posted to Gabon. The country is newly independent, and Largie is eager to explore her new home. She quickly falls in love with Gabon's natural beauty, from its lush rainforests to its pristine beaches. But she also witnesses the challenges that the country faces, including poverty, corruption, and political instability.

Despite the challenges, Largie embraces her new life in Gabon. She learns to speak French, makes friends with local people, and immerses herself in Gabonese culture. She dances with pygmies, attends traditional ceremonies, and learns about the country's rich history.

Largie's experiences in Gabon are both exhilarating and heartbreaking. She witnesses the country's struggle for independence, and she sees firsthand the devastating effects of poverty and disease. But she also sees the resilience of the Gabonese people, and she is inspired by their determination to build a better future.

Country Jumper is a fascinating and deeply personal account of a young woman's journey in a rapidly changing country. Largie's writing is vivid and engaging, and she brings to life the people, places, and events that shaped her experience in Gabon.
