The Globalization of Finance

Moving into the 19th century, the book chronicles the globalization of finance. The expansion of trade and investment led to the creation of international financial markets and the rise of global financial centers. The establishment of the gold standard fostered a sense of stability and facilitated cross-border transactions. However, the book also highlights the challenges and risks that accompanied financial globalization.

The 20th Century: Innovation and Crises

The 20th century witnessed unprecedented growth and innovation in global finance. The establishment of central banks, the creation of new financial instruments, and the development of sophisticated financial markets transformed the global financial landscape. However, the century was also marked by financial crises, including the Great Depression and the 2008 financial crisis. "The Global Financial System 1750-2000 Globalities" analyzes these events, exploring their causes and consequences.
